

PLAISANCE HOTEL #3

On December 1, 1961, at 4:20 p.m., I entered the Plaisance Hotel at 1545 East 60th Street. I asked the gray-haired woman at the switchboard if there were any available rooms, as my brother needed one for the night of December 1st and the night of December 2nd, 1961. She asked me what time my brother would be coming into the hotel, and I told her that he would register at about ten o'clock that evening. The lady assured me that she had rooms available. I answer to my questions she stated that the rooms were "nice" and that they cost five dollars ($5.00) per night. She asked me to write my name on a piece of paper. I did this, writing my name (Bernard Sanders) as well as the name of my brother (Larry Sanders). I told the woman that I would call her back later to make a definite reservation. I asked her for, and she gave me, the hotel's business card.

I swear that the above is a true statement and represents a true and faithful account of the happenings therein recorded.
